PREFACE.

IN committing this work to the press and the public,—the result of much labour and anxiety,—I may profess, without presumption, that my first object is the good of my Irish-speaking countrymen, and the glory of God thereby. I thought it necessary that I should have steadily in view to afford the means, to those unaccustomed to speak Irish from their youth, of speaking and writing in a manner intelligible to the people as they at present use and understand their own language. Having this object before me, I had no temptation to comply with that absurd humour for antiquity which would have us go back even in our orthography to a period which had no standard, and nothing but diversity itself.

I have not taken all the words in Johnson's English Dictionary, for this would make the book too expensive: but, as a general rule, I have omitted only such as are of unusual occurrence in the English language, and therefore unnecessary for intercourse with the peasantry of Ireland.

I have used some Irish words of English origin that are in common use among the people, and because the English and every other language did and does likewise.

There is a great diversity of spelling among Irish scholars, as was the case with the English before Dr. Johnson's time, and is to some extent still: to remedy this I have done all in my power to adopt a uniform spelling. The changes I had to make from the prevailing confusion in the indiscriminate use of the terminations ap and up, aiġ and uiġ, ea and eu; of final letters, such as ḃ and ṫ, &c., are made upon principles which I have explained and shall explain to the Students attending my Irish classes in College, whose information is my first care, and which, I hope, will be satisfactory generally to persons capable of forming a candid judgment.

I believe I have taken as much pains, and as effectually as any other person, to avoid errors of the press, in the midst of many other important engagements; but experience convinces me that, particularly in the circumstances of the Irish language, the difficulty of attaining accuracy is so great, some such, and some of a graver kind, may still be found. It is a comfort to be entirely satisfied, as I am, that the work will certainly serve the class of learners, and contribute to the object I have in view.

I am deeply indebted to the Irish Society, by whose encouragement I was enabled to undertake the work, for affording me the aid of one of my own College pupils—a Bedell Scholar—to labour with me so long as I required his assistance in the details. And I have also gratefully to acknowledge from the Board of Trinity College a liberal grant towards the expenses of its publication.

In now sending it forth, I bow my knees for that blessing from above without which it cannot prosper, in humble hope that I may be found to have thus done something in the cause of Ireland—the land of my birth and best affections.

DANIEL FOLEY.
